Reading and talking about books – starting at birth – is the best way to get little ones ready to read and learn on their own.

We encourage adults to have fun while sharing as many books as possible with young children before they enter school.

Each time you read a book, check a box:

Children love repetition! Each time you read the same book, it counts!

Count books read to your child by anyone – older siblings, grandparents, childcare providers, and storytime librarians.

Keep reading!
